Making sure your kids have money has gotten a little more complicated than putting cash in their pocket. Mobile payments offer convenience and security, but young spenders need guidance too. That's where Teen Banking from Huntington fits in. Let's make their first steps in personal finance as sure-footed as possible.

Crafted for Teens, Shaped by Parents

Teen Banking is a joint checking account with a debit card for teens and personalized settings for parents that can help keep your teen's spending in line and you in the know. They get a little financial freedom, you get the comfort of the bank that looks out for you. Finally, something you can both agree on.

Customizable Spend Settings and alerts^

Parents can set limits for merchants and categories, transfer amounts—even daily, weekly, and monthly spending limits. Choose what works today, and adjust as they grow. Plus, lock lost cards with a tap.

No overdraft fees

There's plenty to learn about money without worrying about overdrawing. Teens won't be able to spend beyond their available balance, but even in the rare case an overdraft occurs, a fee will not be assessed. If they need money, you can transfer funds to their account instantly.

Physical card, digital access

Your teen gets their very own debit card. They can add it to their digital wallet for mobile payments, and use their account with all the popular payment apps, including Zelle® in the Huntington Mobile app.

Powerful insights

You and your teen can easily review their spending habits in the Huntington Mobile app, and start helpful conversations with financial content crafted specifically for teens and families.

Teen Banking is free to open and no cost to maintain. The monthly maintenance fee is waived when parents have an eligible Huntington checking account; otherwise a $5 monthly fee will be withdrawn from the Teen Banking account.†

Saving the Best for Last

We think learning the value of saving is just as important as smart spending, so we'll also waive the monthly maintenance fee on an eligible savings account when you pair it with Teen Banking.

It's never too early to build good spending and saving habits. So if your family's ready for more financial freedom, why not start with your family bank? Welcome your teen to Huntington.
